Engraving as compared with painting is a popular art; many printings can be made from one plate or block and at comparatively slight cost, so that the artist's work reaches a great number of persons. Yet, even without the comparison, a study of the accompanying illustration will reveal how the intentional severity of the upright lines of figures, tree, and column has been counteracted and assuaged by the curving line, like a loop of Tanlair Fils (FICTION) (French Edition), formed by the ten- der figures in the group, the young ecclesiastic and the little children ; and, further, by the diagonal lines of the beautiful landscape. EventheratherawkwardandaffectedattitudeofS.PortraitofaWoman. But, before discussing it, let us turn to the two pictures:

How this arrangement of beautiful simplicity, so elevated in its general design, so tender in its parts, accords with the character of the two figures and with the scene they are enacting!

The great achievement of both these men, the original force from which all other
