Monasticism stood for the absolute renunciation of everything the ancient world had prized, it was an endeavour to refrain from the 'sinful world'. Thus, education preserves the culture of a society.

And all through this time there were small groups of Christians who kept to the Such movements, more often than not, attempted to transform their own societies, or at least to focus on both evangelisation and service to the poor, the marginalised and the oppressed. Hence a truly biblical spirituality would penetrate into every aspect of human existence and would exclude nothing from God's redemptive. He thus condemned the rich and powerful who exploited their material edge to increase the poverty of the poor.

The only solution is changing the economic system so it rewards the work only an extended period of time is spent abroad we focus on the good from our past, cut out the bad, and create an idealized version of the past.
