The Case of Theocritus, Id. The Art of Rhetoric Aristotle. Hellenistic didactic poetry has not really stood up to the test of time, and the Gutzwiller delves also into Apollonius' novel psychological presentation of the heroic deed-challenged Jason and the besotted indecisiveness of the teenaged Medea. Hellenistic poetry is poised between the Greek and Roman worlds, being both poetry of the past and of the future. The first of the book's four parts is a broad overview of the "History and Culture" of the Hellenistic period with an emphasis on what each of the four dynasties that arose in the wake of Alexander's untimely death contributed to the world of art.
