Finally, we will take a morphological point of view and show what the most important tendencies of term formation are in the French marketing language. By subsuming a concept under a specific Matrix Frame, the analyst thus receives a set of dimensions, which can be used for sorting the knowledge laid down in the investigated texts.

This means that instead of textual structures, it focuses on the general structure. Possibly similar effects may account for new terms in other domains as well, when the mental prototype associated with a term connotes an old technological standard. Racine, Chris Sinha and Esa Itkonen.

In the following sentences it collocates, for example, with possessive pronouns. A striking aim in translation research was to make translation processes easier for translators.
