Have about two feet of the dowel poking out of the top of the grip of your clubshaft. This is a great list of tips. I know that I have the tendency to only use my arms, so this will be an adjustment. Focus instead on accuracy. Exaggerate the feel so your lead hip will feel like it sits slightly higher. Your elbows and forearms should form a nice triangle.

If you start to feel more side-on, with a weaker hand-arm release, return to the feeling of setting your chest behind the ball – and that creates space and time to build speed coming into impact.
