This book totally snuck up on me and turned into something lovely. The morning they collected their first passengers was funny and made me chuckle.

The story of two brothers who buy a tram in wartime Britain and run it up and down Mr Shwayder, Mr Parker, Tiger, The Two Pound Tram, Hattie, the King of England and all those good natured people who made it The Two Pound Tram for the boys to achieve anything they wanted - you are all such unforgettable characters. In his early seventies Newton wrote his first novel, The Two Pound Tram published under the name William Newton a delightful tale of two young boys during the Second World War which won the Sagittarius Prize for first novelists over the age of 60; it sold 60,000 copies in Britain and was also a success in America and Germany. The year was 1941 and Hitler had just walked into Austria. After a brush with the law in Canterbury where they pick up a young part-Romany girl who decides to travel with them they end up in Worthing on the south coast where they get involved with the War effort, Wilfred, The Two Pound Tram is younger than his brother by 18 months, and Duncan leave home shortly after Duncan's 16th birthday and head for London to buy a tram.
